

Michael Sidney Turay

As a Final-Year student pursuing a BSc in Computer Science at the University of Makeni (UniMak), i have developed a strong sense of discipline when it comes to Software Engineering Matters. I have been entrusted with managing petty cash within our Technology Donate'

It's commendable that you want to support the Deaf People Community with education and vocational projects. However, for your safety and privacy, it's important not to share sensitive information such as bank account numbers publicly or in unsecured communications.

1. Create a Detailed Proposal:

- Outline the goals, objectives, and expected outcomes of your project.
- Include detailed plans on how the funds will be used.
- Highlight the benefits to the community and any success stories or testimonials if available.

2. Reach Out to Sponsors and Donors:

- Identify organizations, foundations, and individuals who have a history of supporting similar causes.
- Customize your proposal for each potential sponsor, showing how their contribution will make a difference.

3. Crowdfunding:

- Use crowdfunding platforms like GoFundMe, Kickstarter, or Indiegogo to raise funds.
- Create a compelling story and include visuals like photos and videos to attract donors.
- Share the campaign on social media and encourage others to share it as well.

4. Partnerships with NGOs and Local Businesses:

- Collaborate with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that focus on education, vocational training, or disability support.
- Seek partnerships with local businesses that may provide funding, resources, or expertise.

5. Community Fundraisers and Events:

- Organize fundraising events such as charity runs, bake sales, or auctions.
- Engage the local community through events that raise awareness and funds for your project.

6. Grant Applications:

- Apply for grants from government bodies, international organizations, or private foundations that support educational and vocational projects.

7. Social Media Campaigns:

- Use social media platforms to spread awareness about your project.
- Engage with influencers or public figures who can help amplify your message.

This is my Bank Amount: 0016476325